HARTFORD FAMILY RESOURCES DIRECTORY 2016

CIVIC ENGAGEMENT

To be civically engaged means to think, speak and act in the best interests of your family and you, your neighbors, and your broader community. It also means advocating for effective public policies, programs and practices. And it means inspiring others to add their voices and become involved in the ongoing effort to improve the quality of life in our city. This section of the Family Resources Directory lists the leading organizations in Hartford that can provide you with access to all the tools you need to become a community leader who partners with schools, faith communities and nonprofit organizations; engages in civic activities; promotes a safe and healthy environment; and advocates for families on the local and state levels of government.

The After School Enrichment Project, which takes place during the school year, is an afterschool homework club. Each day after school, participants are picked up from Clark Elementary School and walked across the street to The Salvation Army. After receiving a snack, time is set aside each day for children to work on their homework. Depending upon need, they receive individualized attention from staff and volunteers with their homework. Additional activities include crafts, dance, reading, and use of the computer lab. This program runs Monday through Friday, from 3:30PM to 5:30 PM on full school days. There are 20 slots available and most of the children live in the immediate proximity of the building. Children are chosen on a first-come, first-served basis. When the program is running, the school provides an evening meal for the children involved. Program staff also attend this evening meal and bring the children back to The Salvation Army when the meal is finished.

PARKS & FRIENDS OF PARKS

A BRIEF HISTORY

Hartford's public park system is one of the largest of any city in the northeast. Over the years, the city has established 48 parks and public squares covering more than 2,150 acres. A little known fact is that 46 percent of Hartford's owned parkland circles the city and is located outside of its boundaries. This includes Batterson Park in Farmington and portions of three other large parks—Keney Park in the north, Elizabeth Park in the west and Goodwin Park in the south.

The history of Hartford's park system is truly unique in the sense that it was well-conceived and deliberately planned, designed and built. Most of Hartford's park designs adhere to the English landscape tradition of broad open spaces, winding paths, luxuriant foliage, and stone works.

Famous landscape design names are associated with Hartford's park system. Frederick Law Olmstead and his design office and landscape architects, Jacob Weidenmann and Charles Eliot earned national acclaim for their ground-breaking work here and elsewhere, including New York's Central Park. Their creative efforts combined with the public's support and funding as well as the generosity of Hartford's early industrialists and the foresight of the Reverends Horace Bushnell and Francis Goodwin created the Hartford park system.

Most of the city's parks were created between 1895 and 1905 in a concerted effort that residents referred to as "a rain of parks." Hartford residents have always taken an active part in the creation and supervision of the city parks. It was a handful of citizens who in 1888 created a "Board of Park Commissioners" that spurred development of the parks as we now know them. This tradition continues today as residents have joined forces in "friends of the parks" organizations to supplement city funds and the work of the city's Park and Recreation staff. Most notably, Bushnell, Elizabeth and Connecticut Riverfont Parks have greatly benefited from the public's support.

EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATION & HOME DAYCARE PROVIDERS

Hartford is a leader in the state for advancing the progress of pre-school children by using scientifically proven and uniformly applied teaching practices. There is overwhelming evidence confirming the importance of high quality, safe and nurturing early learning experiences as the foundation for school success and lifelong achievements. Hartford is the first large city in the state to require all preschool providers, regardless of their funding sources, to report standard child progress measures based on the State's Early Learning Standards. As a result, the network of Hartford's early learning centers has become a landscape ripe for the development of a coordinated, seamless, early childhood system.

Hartford also has licensed family daycare providers—private family homes caring for up to six children. To be licensed by the State of Connecticut, a home-based provider must meet specific standards, and the children must be cared for not less than three hours and no more than twelve hours during a twenty-four hour period and on a regularly recurring basis. During the school year, a maximum of three additional children who are in school full time may also be cared for.

The Right Place offers Nationally Accredited Early Childhood Education to children, ages three to five, at two Centers in Hartford, and helps children to acquire the skills they need to be successful learners when they enter kindergarten. To reinforce the importance of parent's roles in their child/ren's success, parents take part in workshops and are involved in policy development, fundraising, and classroom volunteering.

The Right Place's licensed capacity is 150 children, with 120 spaces designated for the Hartford Sigourney Child and Family Center and 30 for the Hartford North End Preschool and Family Resource Center. However, more than 200 children are served each year, as children leave to enter Kindergarten and/or relocate. New enrollments are ongoing, which keeps the program at capacity throughout most of the year.

LICENSED, HOME-BASED DAYCARE PROVIDERS

Licensed family day care homes are private family homes caring for up to six children—these may include the provider's own children who are not in school full time. To be licensed by the State of Connecticut, a home-based provider must meet specific standards established by the state. In addition, the children must be cared for not less than three hours and no more than twelve hours during a twenty-four hour period. However, on an exceptional basis or to accommodate special needs, care may be provided in excess of twelve hours but not more than seventy-two consecutive hours and includes intermittent over-night stays. In addition, care must be provided on a regularly recurring basis. During the regular school year, a maximum of three additional children who are in school full time may also be cared for. The provider's own children who are in school full time, regardless of how many, are allowed to be cared for by licensed home-based providers.

WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

Most organizations listed in this section of the Family Resources Directory offer some form of workforce development. This includes traditional schools; academy schools dedicated to specific fields of study and work; nonprofit and government employers that provide on-the-job training for career advancement; and service organizations in the public and private sectors that offer career training for people with disabilities, limited English language proficiency, low literacy and math skills, and people recovering from addiction or readjusting to society after serving prison time. The array of workforce development opportunities in Hartford provides a way to increase equity among residents of our entire region. There are opportunities for low-wage earning inner city residents who may not have had access to a quality education, but who, through workforce development programs, can increase their skill level so they can compete with suburbanites for high-paying jobs.

Opportunity Youth - Pathways Programs

Of the more than 20,000 youth between the ages of 16 and 24 years old in Hartford, about 1 in 3 either: (1) Does not have a high school diploma; or (2) Has a high school diploma but is not in school and not working. These youth, known as “Opportunity Youth”, face multiple hurdles to success in the workforce.

Hartford Opportunity Youth Collaborative is chaired by the Mayor of Hartford and made up of leaders in education, youth development, and workforce development committed to addressing the needs of Opportunity Youth. In order to reconnect youth to success, we developed a comprehensive plan that integrates education, youth development, and workforce development systems. Our activities include:

- Implementing the education and career pathway system to build effective pathways to success.
- Using Results-Based Accountability (RBA) to inform decision-making and assess progress.
- Empowering youth leaders to advise, advocate, and lead solutions for themselves, their peers, and their community.
- Advocating for supportive policies to resolve system barriers and increase the adoption, replication, and scaling up of effective practices.

Together, we are implementing an array of strategies to position Opportunity Youth as a solution to challenging demographic and economic projections, including a shrinking and aging workforce and a mismatch between worker skills and well-paying jobs. Our efforts will transform the lives of Opportunity Youth, increase the number of taxpayers employed in middle-skill jobs, reduce public expenditure in safety net services, and expand economic opportunities by providing businesses with a qualified workforce.

SUPPORT SERVICES

In our community as in most urban communities, Hartford has a population with a disproportionate number of low-income, under-educated families. Many of these residents require support services to meet their daily needs, prepare them to climb the economic ladder, and attain financial stability. Fortunately, our community also has an astounding array of high-quality support services provided by many nonprofit human services organizations. The services they offer include adult education, life skills counseling, financial capacity-building, food and nutrition supports, health services, housing assistance, legal services, violence and substance abuse prevention, along with referrals to other needed services.

GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Being the state's Capital City, Hartford is home to municipal family resources agencies as well as state and federal agencies. On the federal level, Hartford houses the regional office of the Department of Emergency Management and Homeland Security as well the regional office of the Food and Drug Administration. Among the many state agencies located in Hartford that provide family resources to Hartford residents are the Governor's Office, the State Office of Education, the Department of Families and Children, the Connecticut Department of Health, the Commission on Children, Department of Developmental Services, Department of Housing, Department on Aging and many more. While several agencies of Hartford's City government provide family resources, the two largest are the Department of Families, Children, Youth and Recreation and the Department of Health and Human Resources.

NEIGHBORHOOD REVITALIZATION ZONES

A law enacted in 1995 established a process for the development of Neighborhood Revitalization Zones (NRZs). Since then Hartford has formed 14 NRZs. To support interaction and cooperation with each other, a largely volunteer organization named Hartford 2000 was created in partnership with the city.

The objective of the NRZ process is to revitalize neighborhoods through the collaborative involvement of residents, businesses and government to determine the vision and priorities of the individual neighborhoods. The NRZ process provides a mechanism for local stakeholders, along with local municipal officials, to develop a strategic plan to revitalize their neighborhood where there are significant numbers of properties that are abandoned, blighted, foreclosed and deteriorated. Information provided in this section describes the NRZs and the work they do.

SPECIAL ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Department of Families, Children, Youth and Recreation would like to thank United Way of Central and Northeastern Connecticut and 2-1-1 Infoline for their partnership and support. The Department also expresses its thanks to Victoria Rosado for her tireless review of resources and also to Metro Hartford Information Service (MHIS) for the use and support of their online geographic information system (GIS). Finally, a special note of gratitude to Joel Sánchez as this project would not have been possible without his commitment, team management, and creative leadership.

While this directory is comprehensive, it is not inclusive of all Hartford resources. If you don't find the types of services you are looking for within this directory, we encourage you to call 2-1-1 and speak with support staff.
